February 9, 2010 Victoria, BC Canada – The Canadian National Martial Arts Association (CNMAA) is pleased to announce that CNMAA President Ken Marchtaler has been named Vice President of the Sport for All Canada Society, a newly formed organization headed up by former Tennis Canada CEO Bob Moffatt. The new society will act as the voice for The Association For International Sport for All (TAFISA) in Canada. TAFISA, the leading world authority on Sport for All, is an IOC Recognized Multi-Sport Organization, with offices in Frankfurt and Busan and over 200 members worldwide. "I am honoured to be sitting amongst some of the most prestigious names in Canadian sport", says CNMAA President Ken Marchtaler, "Sport for All represents an opportunity for smaller organizations to associate and develop amongst those that are already supported and recognized. For martial arts, this means a new opportunity for growth, prosperity and inclusion."
